ABSTRACT

[0038]   A system for protecting configuration data of a programmable execution unit (PEU) comprises a programmable array and programming logic. The programming logic is configured to receive configuration data and to program the programmable array, based on the configuration data, such that the programmable array comprises functional logic and activation logic. The activation logic is configured to enable the functional logic upon detection of an activation key.